@MikeFOX29 Stop apologizing! Lochte is a freakin idiot! It goes in one ear and out the other cause there is nothing to stop it.

Bike sharers, take note

The Mayor's Office of Transportation and Utilities and Philadelphia Parks and Recreation will host some leading vendors of bike-share equipment in Rittenhouse Square from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 30. There, people can try out the equipment that's being used in cities across the country.

Activists target Penn for lab-animal protest

Rally. Advocates say the University of Pennsylvania's labs have the most Animal Welfare Act violations of any Ivy League school.

Members of animal-rights group Animal ACTivists of Philly yesterday rallied outside the University of Pennsylvania, a school they're are calling "a horror show for animals with a long history of abuses" in its labs.

"We're focusing on the University of Pennsylvania because it's the biggest university in the area when it comes to animal abuse," said director Marianne, who declined to give her last name. "In addition, it has the most violations of the Animal Welfare Act of any Ivy League institute."

The Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine last year released a report stating all Ivy League schools had a "disturbingly high" number of violations and ranking Penn the worst offender.

Protesters especially took issue with the school's continued experimentation on primates. "It's very hard to justify it because they're so close to us," Marianne said. "They've done so many experiments and they've found nothing. They cured AIDS in chimps, but when they tried to translate that to humans, it didn't work."

But Penn Media Relations Director Ron Ozio said in an email that the school's biomedical research "is aimed at finding treatments and cures for some of the most vexing diseases of our time, for both humans and animals" and "committed to maintaining the highest standard of care" for lab animals. "The university carefully investigates any report of a potential animal welfare violation and takes corrective steps where necessary," he said.

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH
awigglesworth@metro.us

Alleged abuses

Activists claim the university's abuses include:

- Castrating baby pigs without anesthesia, supposedly to better understand the needs of farmers
- Bolting primates in cages to monitor their brain waves in times of food or sleep deprivation
- "I think if you dreamed up something you think is impossible, there's probably somebody somewhere doing it," Marianne said.

Advocates said Penn conducts primate experiments resembling the one shown on this sign. / RIKARD LARMA

Dismissed. Judge knocks off three charges for Gosnell

A Pennsylvania judge dismissed three murder charges yesterday against Kermit Gosnell, the Philadelphia abortion doctor accused of killing babies.

Gosnell, 72, still faces charges of killing four infants and a woman who underwent an abortion and died at his Women's Medical Society clinic in West Philadelphia.

He could face the death penalty if convicted. Judge Jeffrey Minehart dismissed three of the murder charges after Gosnell's attorney argued that the prosecution failed to present evidence that the infants had been born alive.

Crash

Accident kills one

A one-car crash killed a Lansdale man and injured another in Salford Township, Montgomery County, yesterday.

The accident occurred around 12:10 a.m. on Route 563 near Sugar Hill Drive.

The car left the roadway and struck a pole, reportedly splitting it in two. METRO

Shooting

Boy, 7, shot in hand

A 7-year-old boy was shot in his hand inside a Wilmington home Monday night.

The shooting happened around 10 p.m. inside a home on the 200 block of Delamore Street, The News Journal of Wilmington reports.

The circumstances of the shooting were unclear. METRO

Firefighter to get plaque at Fox Chase rec center

Dedicated. A plaque, the first of two, will be added at the Fox Chase recreation center in Sweeney's honor.

The first of two memorials for departed firefighter Dan Sweeney will be unveiled this weekend.

A plaque, which will hang on the red clubhouse and snack bar that rides along the third baseline of Field 1, will be dedicated Saturday at 11 a.m.

"Danny Sweeney epitomizes Fox Chase," said City Councilman Brian O'Neill, who represents the northeast section of the city. "And [the playground] is the cornerstone of Fox Chase."

Sweeney and Lt. Robert Neary were killed on April 9, 2012, after a wall collapsed at a Kensington fire.

Field 1, the largest of the four diamonds at the upper fields of Fox Chase Playground in the Northeast Philly neighborhood, will be dedicated to Sweeney on June 23. A sign will be placed behind the backstop, where he played catcher for his Fox Rok baseball teams.

The second annual softball tournament, which raises money for a scholarship in Sweeney's name, will be played on the same day. His brethren of the Engine 56th firehouse will be the first to play on the field after it's dedicated.

Neighbors lobbied for the past year to honor Sweeney, pushing for an appropriate memorial for the deceased hero.

All the while, the Sweeney family still wishes they could rewind the hands of time.

"It's a nice thing to honor him, these things are all nice," said Sweeney's father Dave Sweeney, a retired fire captain. "But we still miss him every day."

SEPTA makes plea for more funds

Money. SEPTA officials said the company needs more cash to operate.

Three-hundred and eight million isn't enough, SEPTA officials said at its capital budget hearing Tuesday.

The $308 million capital budget can only fund debt repayment, repairs and a new fleet, and it "will severely hamper SEPTA's ability to bring the transit system to a state of good repair," according to the authorities' public testimony.

SEPTA needs money, they say.
FILE PHOTO

With a capital budget that has been reduced by 25 percent over the last three years, officials said it needs more. SEPTA said it could not expand services, or renovate dilapidated structures, without added funding.

Gov. Tom Corbett proposed a five-year, $1.8 billion increase in transportation funding, offering state transit about $40 million the first year. It would jump to $250 million by year five.

A different plan proposed by state Sen. John Rafferty would make about $500 million available for SEPTA-type organizations over five years.

Alfred Achtert, of Upper Darby, stepped to the podium and shook his head.

"This budget is a disaster," Achtert said, adding that the only money-generating power the authority has is through the fare box.

"The problem becomes 90 miles west of here," he said.

Pa. job growth plummets

Pennsylvania this month dropped to 49th in the United States in job growth, according to numbers released last week by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Pennsylvania is the only state with an over-the-year percentage decrease in employment.

The state's labor force in March shrank by the biggest one-month amount in three decades.

"Gov. Corbett has overseen a Pennsylvanian economy in decline," Pennsylvania Democratic Party Chairman Jim Burn said in a statement. "The last economic report just further illustrates how disastrous Tom Corbett's economy has been for the middle class."

Boston bomb suspect's wife assisting probe

Wife. She was born in America, converted to Islam and is not a suspect.

The wife of the dead Boston Marathon bombing suspect is assisting authorities, and she is in absolute shock that her husband and brother-in-law were accused of the deadly blasts, her lawyer said yesterday.

The 19-year-old brother-in-law Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, who survived shoot-outs with police and has been criminally charged, was upgraded to "fair" from "serious" condition yesterday at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, the U.S. Attorney's Office in Boston said.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, was killed in a shoot-out with police last week as authorities hunted for him and his younger brother. The FBI had identified the brothers as suspects last Thursday, based on pictures and video taken at the scene of the bombing on the marathon finish line on April 15.

A lawyer for Katherine Russell, 24, said she was busy caring for their 2-and-a-half-year-old daughter and working as a home health-care aide in the time leading up the blasts that killed three people and wound more than 200.

"She is doing everything she can to assist with the investigation," the lawyer, Amato DeLuca, said outside his Providence, R.I., office. "The reports of involvement by her husband and brother-in-law came as an absolute shock to them all." REUTERS

Hackers seize AP Twitter feed, send White House hoax

The AP's two Twitter accounts, @AP and @AP_Mobile, were suspended shortly after the fake tweet.
GETTY IMAGES

Bogus. The AP's Twitter feed reported two explosions at the White House.

Hackers took control of the Associated Press' Twitter account on Tuesday and sent a false tweet of two explosions in the White House that briefly sent U.S. financial markets reeling.

AP spokesman Paul Colford quickly confirmed the tweet was "bogus," but within the minutes of the tweet hitting the Web, virtually all U.S. markets took a plunge on the false news in what one trader described as "pure chaos."

White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters that President Barack Obama was fine soon after the tweet went out a little after 1 p.m.

Markets quickly recovered losses after the tweet was knocked down. Some traders blamed automatic electronic trading for the sharp fall and bounce back.

At a time when cybersecurity and hacking have become top national security concerns, Twitter and its reach to hundreds of millions of users is coming under growing scrutiny for the risk of data breaches on the site.

A group calling itself the Syrian Electronic Army, which is supportive of that country's leader, President Bashar al-Assad, yesterday claimed responsibility on its own Twitter feed for the AP hack.

The group, which creates new Twitter accounts every time the company suspends its old ones, has recently also claimed credit for similar hacks of Twitter accounts for National Public Radio, BBC and CBS's "60 Minutes" program, among others. REUTERS

Neutral. Washington state removes gender bias from its statutes

Washington state's governor signed into law this week the final piece of a six-year effort to rewrite state laws using gender-neutral vocabulary, replacing terms such as "fisherman" and "freshman" with "fisher" and "first-year student."

Lawmakers have passed a series of bills since 2007 to root out gender bias from Washington statutes, though a 1983 state mandate required that all laws be written in gender-neutral terms unless a specification of gender was intended.

New gender-neutral references, for example, include "journey-level plumber" instead of "journeyman plumber," "handwriting" in place of "penmanship," and "signal operator" for "signalman." REUTERS

Senate panel seeking answers on furloughs

Cuts. Air travelers experience delays at airports across the country.

Senate Commerce Committee leaders yesterday pressed the Obama administration for more information on how its plan to furlough air traffic controllers and close contract towers would affect public safety and air operations, in the latest sign lawmakers could pass legislation to overturn the decision.

"We are now faced with substantial possible disruptions to the air transportation system," Senate Commerce Committee Chairman Jay Rockefeller, a Democrat, and Sen. John Thune, the top Republican on the panel, said in a letter to Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood and Federal Aviation Administration Administrator Michael Huerta.

The FAA furloughs, which started Sunday, are intended to cut staffing by 10 percent to save $200 million of $637 million the agency needs to pare from its budget. Of 47,000 employees facing furloughs, which are expected to last through September, nearly 13,000 are air traffic controllers.

The agency also plans to shut down 149 contract air traffic control towers at smaller airports on June 15 to meet automatic spending cuts. REUTERS

Safety. NTSB seeks larger lesson in Boeing 787 lithium battery fire

The top U.S. transportation safety agency is looking beyond what caused a Boeing Dreamliner battery to fail in January at larger lessons that can be applied to the airplane certification process and new technologies.

A two-day hearing at the National Transportation Safety Board headquarters in Washington that began yesterday delved into what Boeing and the Federal Aviation Administration knew about volatile lithium-ion batteries when they proposed them for use on the Dreamliner, and how they addressed the risks.

Boeing said that it did not believe during design and testing that a fire could occur in the lithium-ion battery system that failed on the Dreamliner.. REUTERS

Mississippi man in letter probe released from jail

The Mississippi man charged with sending toxic letters to President Barack Obama and a U.S. senator has been released from jail, the U.S. Marshals Service said yesterday.

Paul Kevin Curtis, 45, was released on bond, Jeff Woodfin, chief deputy with the U.S. Marshals Service in Oxford, Mississippi, told Reuters.

His release came as court documents showed a hearing on his detention has been indefinitely postponed, but the charges against him had not been dropped. REUTERS

Terror plot. Canadian passenger train plot suspects in court

Canadian police said only that the plot involved a passenger train route in the Toronto area. They said that there had been no immediate threat to rail passengers or to the public. / FLICKR

Two men charged with an alleged al Qaeda-backed plot to derail a Canadian passenger train made their first court appearances yesterday, and the lawyer for one said his client would fight the charges vigorously.

Raed Jaser of Toronto, 35, and Chiheb Esseghaier, 30, face charges that include conspiring "with each other to murder unknown persons for the benefit of, at the direction of, or in association with a terrorist group."

They were arrested on Monday in separate raids after what police said was an investigation that started in the middle of last year after a tip from a member of the Muslim community.

Officers detained Jaser at his home, a brick semi-detached house in a north Toronto neighborhood, and arrested Esseghaier at a McDonald's restaurant in Montreal's main train station.

U.S. officials said that the suspects were believed to have worked on a plan involving blowing up a trestle on the Canadian side of the border as the Maple Leaf, Amtrak's daily connection between Toronto and New York, passed over it.

Jaser, dark and heavily bearded and wearing a black cap, arrived by police car at Toronto's Old City Hall courthouse. He was kept in custody after a brief hearing. Media were barred from giving details of Jaser's hearing under a publication ban requested by his lawyer.

"He denies the allegations and he will vigorously defend them," the lawyer, John Norris, said outside the court, describing Jaser as being in a state of "shock and disbelief."

Norris would not disclose Jaser's nationality, saying that the publication ban precluded discussing his client's personal circumstances. But he said Jaser has been a resident of Canada for 20 years. REUTERS

Marriage for all

French parliament approves gay marriage law

France became the 14th country to allow same-sex marriage on Tuesday after parliament approved a new law championed by President Francois Hollande, but it came at a political price amid violent street protests and a rise in homophobic attacks.

Hollande's "marriage for all" law is one of the biggest social reforms in France since his left-wing mentor and predecessor Francois Mitterrand abolished the death penalty in 1981, a move which also split opinion. REUTERS

Explosives found near Musharraf house

Pakistani police said yesterday they had defused 110 pounds of explosives hidden in a car wired with remote-controlled detonators near the fortified farmhouse where former president Pervez Musharraf remains under house arrest.

The discovery added a new sub-plot to the saga of Musharraf's deepening legal woes, which have transfixed Pakistanis unaccustomed to the sight of a once all-powerful military ruler submitting to the will of judges. REUTERS

We're checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Ewan McGregor has spent a bit too much time out in nature, Chris Colfer likes to go unnoticed, Craig Ferguson is learning all of California's dirty secrets and Olivia Wilde is having trouble with her paper products.

@mcgregor_ewan: I'm so happy to be in a city. Melbourne I think I love you.

@CraigyFerg: The grass is greener in LA cause we paint it.

1 Won't someone love Ryan Lochte?

Ryan Lochte is having a hard time finding love. "I haven't been in a relationship in a year," the Olympian and star of the new reality TV show "What Would Ryan Lochte Do?" says in the new issue of In Touch. "Every time I date someone, I end up getting hurt."

The problem, it seems, is that he doesn't know if women are after his giant brain (this is the man who wore a fake grill on the Olympian podium and coined the catchphrase "Jeah!" so by "giant brain" I might be using slight sarcasm) or his public persona. "I don't know if they're just after my fame and money or if they like me for who I really am."

But if he could find someone he really does like, what is he looking for? "A girl that's fun, classy and sweet who I can have a conversation with," Lochte says. "If she can make me smile and laugh, I'm sold!"

My advice for his next potential love interest? Pretend to take his nose. He would be so enamored of your magical powers, you'd be unstoppable.

2 Cyrus and Hemsworth: Still together

Despite indications of trouble between Miley Cyrus and Liam Hemsworth, the pair are "still engaged," according to E! News. "They live together. The wedding is not off," a source says. "You can't postpone a wedding that never had a date in the first place. Their plan all along was to wait a couple of years before even thinking about a date." As for the eyebrows Cyrus has raised by stepping out multiple times without her engagement ring? "She just doesn't wear it sometimes," the source adds. "People shouldn't read too much into that."

3 Bieber's monkey will stay in Germany

If you have been worrying about Justin Bieber's monkey (that is not a euphemism; dude has a baby pet monkey that was quarantined by German authorities last month because he didn't have the correct paperwork), it seems like the pet, Mally, will stay in Germany. According to a German paper, Bieber's people have reached out to see if Germany can keep it.

Mally is currently in a Munich animal sanctuary. Animal shelter boss Karl Heinz Joachim described the situation as "heart-breaking," saying, "A baby monkey is not suitable on a world tour, even if he is traveling by private jet."

Let's be honest: Germany is probably a better option for Mally than being around Bieber.

Katy Perry is getting more and more comfortable talking about her divorce from Russell Brand, even challenging a Hollywood Reporter staffer's classification of it as an "elephant in the room" as far as conversations go. "It's a very tiny elephant," she says. "It's like a little tchotchke now. The big D — you can say it." Brand filed for divorce from Perry in December 2011 after 14 months of marriage.

A piano prodigy takes the stage

Music. Jonathan Biss will perform with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Not to throw the phrase "musical genius" around, but pianist Jonathan Biss made his Carnegie Hall debut — to rave reviews — while he was still in his teens. Now 32, Biss is taking a break from teaching music to collaborate with the Philadelphia Orchestra for a series of performances this week.

Biss studied piano at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music under the legendary Leon Fleisher and is now on the faculty of the prestigious school.

"Teaching enriches my music," he says. "Practicing is often a solo task. Teaching allows me to share my love of music with others."

Biss is a third-generation musician. Samuel Barber composed his Cello Concerto, which won the New York Critic's Circle Award, specifically for Biss's grandmother, Raya Garbousova. Biss recently performed with his mother, the renowned violinist Miriam Fried, at the Kimmel Center, and his father, Paul Biss, is also a violinist of note.

"My parents just wanted us to play music," says Biss. "They did not care what instrument it was. My brother chose the piano and I followed his footsteps. I'm glad that I chose a different instrument than them because I was able to make my own mistakes."

Biss also has the distinction of being the only classical musician Kindle has ever asked to write an e-book. "Beethoven's Shadow" was ranked the No. 1 music offering on Amazon for several months.

He's turning to a different musical master for his Philadelphia Orchestra gig, playing Mozart's rarely heard Concerto No. 13.

"Many people find it comfortable to go to a concert to hear something that they have heard before. I think there is something magical about introducing the audience to something that they have not," he says.

Inventing the women's

Theater. "If She Stood" draws from historical documents and journals.

When playwright Ain Gordon gets a grant to create a play, he travels to the city of the granting institution and wanders the streets for a while in search of a "personal sense of the place."

It didn't take long in Philadelphia. Just blocks from the Painted Bride Art Center sits the Arch Street Friends Meeting House, an early hub of the abolitionist movement.

Gordon's latest piece, "If She Stood," will debut at the Painted Bride this week. It's based loosely on historical documents and journals from women in the 19th-century Philadelphia Anti-Slavery Society.

"I got very interested in the fact that it was an interracial body and all women and that, at the same time they were fighting slavery, they were inventing the women's movement," says Gordon.

Many of these women either were Quakers or attended meetings regularly, leading Gordon to reimagine the Painted Bride's theater as a Quaker Meeting house, with the audience

Going American with Colin Firth and Emily Blunt

Interview.
The actors talk about shedding their proper English accents.

Colin Firth and Emily Blunt talk like Americans in "Arthur Newman." / CINEDIGM

People tend to freak when a Brit adopts an American accent, or vice versa.

"It's not that big a deal for us," confesses Emily Blunt. "We just see it as another character, and taking on another voice." Blunt stars with fellow countryperson Colin Firth in "Arthur Newman," as two people on the run from their lives. In the film, both actors talk American.

"I've rarely done a film in England that doesn't include an American actress, often doing an English accent," jokes Firth.

Firth, like Blunt, has a very proper English accent — or at least one would assume. "The accent that people think comes naturally to me is not the one I grew up with," reveals Firth. "I am from what is known as the 'west country' of England." He says he deliberately lost his native accent when he was first trying to be an actor.

Quoted

"If every actor played exactly what they were, then every film would be about a bunch of neurotic actors."
Colin Firth

"In England you're trained to learn what is known in our field as 'BBC English,'" he says. "I think people I went to school with probably got a bit of a shock when they first heard me trying to sound patrician."

"There's a tendency in England that if you come from a family that speaks a bit posh that you want to reject that," says Blunt. "A lot of kids who come from upple-middle-class family walk around [adopts Cockney-ish accent] talking like that, know wha' I mean?"

But working outside one's station is good, says Firth. "If every actor played exactly what they were, then every film would be about a bunch of neurotic actors."

'American Psycho' musical will get a British premiere

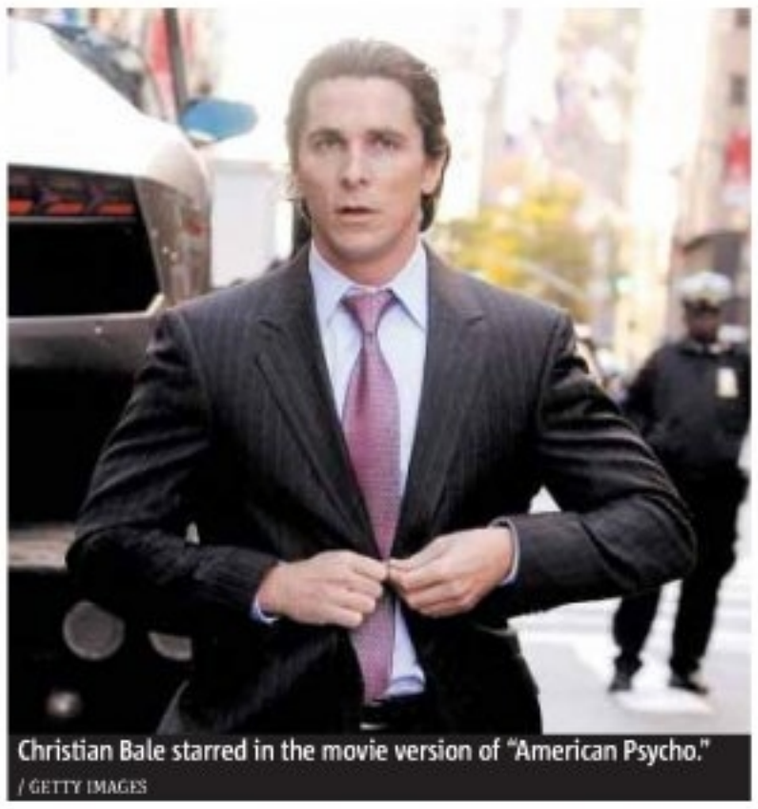
Theater. The controversial novel is being turned into a play.

A musical based on Bret Easton Ellis's "American Psycho," the disturbing tale of a Wall Street banker turned sadistic serial killer, will have its world premiere in London in December.

A spokesman for London's Almeida Theatre said that the show will open on Dec. 3 and run until Jan. 25.

American playwright Roberto Aguirre-Sacasa, best known for his work on the U.S. television series "Glee," is producing the script. The show is directed by Briton Rupert Goold.

The music and lyrics will be produced by American singer-songwriter Duncan Sheik, who wrote the music for "Spring Awakening" but is best known for his 1996 debut single "Barely Breathing."



Christian Bale starred in the movie version of "American Psycho." / GETTY IMAGES

Ellis' novel, published in 1991, is a satire about 1980s yuppie culture and follows Wall Street investment banker Patrick Bateman, an obsessive materialist who by night commits murders — or at least imagines he commits them — while losing himself in drugs and prostitution.

On its release, "American Psycho" shocked readers with graphic content, which included Bateman torturing a woman with a rat. In Australia the book was shrink-wrapped and could not be sold to anyone aged under 18.

The book was adapted into a film in 2000 starring Christian Bale, while a project to adapt the book into a musical for the United States was first announced in 2008.

Producer Jesse Singer said the team behind the musical had decided to move it to London, where Goold is based and is associated with the Almeida Theatre, and to try the show off-Broadway first.

Superheroes. How much would it cost to be Iron Man in real life?

It would cost $10 billion to fund superhero Iron Man's high-tech lifestyle in "Iron Man 3" — about $9 billion more than past films.

Fictional billionaire Tony Stark is the CEO of his company Stark Enterprises, but in reality, what doesn't he do? He's a chemist, an inventor, an engineer and an entrepreneur. He may bring in the big bucks, but he's certainly a spender when it comes to being properly equipped to ward off bad guys.

In July, MoneySupermarket.com put together an infographic of what it would cost to be Iron Man, but as he embraces more new tech in the upcoming film "Iron Man 3," the total cost has jumped from $1.6 billion to $10 billion.

The suits featured in "Iron Man 3" total $7 billion alone — previously they totaled $1.4 billion.

By the numbers

Among the new bells and whistles include a hyper velocity shot gun and updated armor.

Existing technologies include rocket-propelled boots that make him fly ($3.8 million), a helmet with projected holographic displays ($54 million) and the arc reactor nuclear power source built into his suit ($26 million).

Not to mention his $25 million mansion in Malibu and a whole fleet of fancy sport cars.

Netflix is now bigger than ever

Tech. Three million new subscribers flocked to Netflix Instant.

Netflix added three million subscribers to its streaming video service in the first quarter, bringing the total number to 36 million viewers, the company reported on Monday. Those viewers streamed four billion hours of programming during the quarter.

The increase prompted a surge in after-hours trading for the stock, which broke $200 for the first time since 2011. Revenues for the quarter also broke $1 billion in revenues and reported earnings per share of $0.32 — higher than analysts had predicted.

In a letter to shareholders, CEO Reed Hastings and CFO David Wells credited the original series "House of Cards" with giving Netflix some social media buzz.

Total number of Netflix viewers, according to the company

"The global viewing and high level of engagement with the show increased our confidence in our ability to pick shows Netflix members will embrace and to pick partners skilled at delivering a great series," they wrote. "The high level of viewer satisfaction implies we are able to target the right audience without the benefit of existing broadcast or cable viewing data and the strong viewing across all our markets gives us faith in our ability to create global content brands in a cost-effective, efficient way." Fewer than 8,000 people took advantage of a free trial to watch the show and then cancel, according to the letter.

Several more original series are planned for streaming, including "Arrested Development" and "Derek," which it describes "as a "heartfelt, funny look at life in a senior center from Ricky Gervais." The company, which added one million new streaming subscribers in markets outside the U.S., plans to announce expansion into a yet-unnamed European market during its call with analysts Monday afternoon.

5 HEALING FOODS TO HELP COMBAT YOUR NEXT MIGRAINE

Make a mug of migraine-fighting tea by adding ginger to boiling water.
GETTY IMAGES

If you suffer from migraine headaches, you don't need me to tell you that they're downright lousy and debilitating. While there's no magical food cure for an aching head, there are foods rich in certain ingredients that have been shown to reduce the intensity, duration and frequency. Here are a few superstars to know about.

Ginger tea

Ginger is an herb that can help prevent migraines and may even help relieve pain after you've been hit with one. You can buy one of the mainstream brands that make ginger tea, or you can easily prepare your own homemade version by cutting fresh ginger into thin strips and boiling with water for about 5 minutes. And with warmer weather right around the corner, try pouring your tea over some ice for a cool, refreshing version. Bonus: The water helps to keep you hydrated, which is incredibly important since dehydration is a common migraine trigger.

Joy's Healthy Bite

JOY BAUER

WWW.JOYBAUER.COM

Health and wellness expert for the 'Today' show and New York Times best-selling author.

Quinoa

This tasty ancient grain can help combat migraines because it's a terrific source of magnesium (one cup cooked provides 30 percent of your daily requirement). Research shows that a diet high in magnesium can help prevent all kinds of migraines, but particularly menstrual migraines. The best part about quinoa? Although it's tricky to pronounce (it's keen-wah), it's super simple to make. Just boil it in water or low-sodium broth for about 20 minutes and season it up with your favorite herbs and spices. Enjoy this yummy grain plain, turn it into a pilaf with chopped carrots or eat it as hot cereal (like oatmeal). In the Bauer house we make "Breakfast Quinoa Parfaits" with cold dinner leftovers. Just top cooked quinoa with a dollop of Greek yogurt, some toasted sunflower seeds and chopped fruit (like apples, grapes, or berries). Yum!

Eggs, spinach, and mushrooms

These three powerhouses are excellent sources of riboflavin (also called vitamin B2). This vitamin is necessary for the body's production of energy at the cellular level and some research suggests that people with migraines may have a genetic defect that makes it difficult for their cells to maintain energy reserves. Prepare a two-egg omelet with a ½ cup each of cooked spinach and mushrooms, and you're ingesting two-thirds of your daily requirement for riboflavin. Easy and delish!

An omelet can curb that brutal headache.

Fertility. Your mind-set might make the difference.

If you're having trouble conceiving, you're not alone — approximately 6.1 million women in the U.S., or 10 percent of the population — struggle with infertility, according to the CDC. National Infertility Awareness Week (Apr. 21-27) seeks to raise awareness of this issue with events across the country like seminars, fertility consultations, walks and support groups. Women's health expert Dr. Donnica L. Moore, a spokesperson for the Clearblue ovulation test, says that some problems in conceiving can be avoided. She gave us her preconception checklist:

Be patient. "Women erroneously think that once they stop taking birth control, voila! They will become pregnant. It can happen, but generally the hormones have to settle down."

Mark your calendar. "There are four or five days when a woman is most likely to conceive. The time of ovulation and a few days before is when couples need to plan to have intercourse. That's where Clearblue come in. It checks the LH surge [a rise in luteinizing hormone, which happens right before ovulation starts]."

Enjoy sex. "Procreational sex is very different from recreational sex and it puts a lot of stress on couples. That stress makes you less likely to want to have sex, and it becomes a vicious cycle."

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

What to eat for a baby

"A healthy diet is critical to women seeking to conceive," says Dr. Victoria Maizes, author of "Be Fruitful: The Essential Guide to Maximizing Fertility and Giving Birth to a Healthy Child." She advises the following:

- Fill up on fish. "Fish not only contain high-quality protein, they're the best source of omega-3 fatty acids," she says. "Wild salmon, sardines and herring are the richest dietary sources. Due to mercury contamination, avoid shark, swordfish, tilefish and king mackerel completely, and limit albacore tuna to once a week."
- Opt for organic. "Pesticide residues can distort normal hormonal function and increase the risk that your child could suffer from learning disabilities and cancers."
- Minimize meat. "A study [showed] vegetable protein reduces infertility and animal protein increases it."
- Ditch low-fat dairy — really! "Drinking or eating whole-fat dairy products is associated with a lower risk of infertility. This may be due to the way the hormonal balance shifts when we remove milk fat to make low-fat or nonfat milk products."

Sneak peek: New Brooks Brothers 'Great Gatsby' line

Preview. Brooks Brothers takes the menswear they provided for "The Great Gatsby" movie to the store.

It isn't a fashion film if it doesn't have a clothing line attached to it. The long-awaited blockbuster "The Great Gatsby," starring costumes by Miuccia Prada and Brooks Brothers, will arrive with a corresponding menswear line that's already in stores. Yup, that means you can get a hold of Leonardo DiCaprio's '20s-style tailoring from the film. The limited edition collection is inspired by the suits Brooks Brothers created for the male characters in the movie, played by DiCaprio, Tobey Maguire and others.

"Brooks Brothers is mentioned numerous times in Fitzgerald's writings as a representation of the ultimate gentleman's purveyor of fine clothing to the American man of distinction," says Catherine Martin, the costume designer behind the film's 500-strong wardrobe.

"The Great Gatsby" collection includes suiting, shirts, ties, waist coats and formal wear and is an interpretation of the film's looks, rather than a stitch-for-stitch reproduction.

The '20s were about champagne-fuelled, hedonistic razzle-dazzle, and these clothes capture that. Take, for instance, the white tailored suit and two-tone brogues pictured above. It's quite a look. In our opinion, the wearability of the bottle-green cardigan pictured above (as seen in the movie) is likely to make it the biggest seller.

Living Pretty

PLUS

Larson's decor tip

"Say you can only afford CB2, Target and West Elm, which have pieces that are cute and on-trend and will make for a great foundation. But then go to a flea market and layer on beautiful textiles, great rugs, old books and moments that will add a sense of timelessness to the foundation. You'll have a much more cohesive design."

Design. Style Me Pretty (our favorite site for wedding inspirations) recently launched a lifestyle blog.

New brides experiencing wedding withdrawal might feel nuts still checking Style Me Pretty, but rest assured: The wedding website doesn't want to part ways either. "For a year, it's become a habit of our readers to come to Style Me Pretty and have their coffee with us, and we want them to stay," says founder Abby Larson. To keep us coming back, she's applied the same sunny tone, gorgeous aesthetic and charming details that got us hooked to SMP in the first place to life's next stages in Style Me Pretty Living, a site filled with decor, entertaining and DIY ideas.

Here, Larson shares her tips for throwing a party and decorating a home worthy of our new everyday read.

Q&A

Do you feel the natural next step for young brides is to focus on the home?
"I do. That's the experience with myself and my friends. Something happens when you get married you ditch the rental, and you start using the china that you bought on your registry and you want dinner parties and date nights. You want a slightly elevated entertaining experience. So the goal is to make this space where readers are encouraged to be silly and have fun with their designing and entertaining."

Larson's entertaining tips

Abby Larson

ERIC LAURITS

It's OK to get some help: "Not everyone has the money to hire service providers, but there are always details that you can get help with that will really take away some of the stress, whether it's getting a florist to design your centerpiece, hiring a bartender for a cocktail party or buying a pre-roasted chicken and making the side dishes for a dinner party. It's this balance of what you can do so it still feels like you built this day. But you're not so stressed that you can't enjoy."

Plan an 'experience': "Did you give them a great cocktail to start off with? Is there beautiful music playing the background? Is there a sense of ease and laughter that permeates through every minute of your party? It's really planning for that whole experience that creates successful events."

Have a fun backup game at the ready: "We love a question game. For a recent dinner party I held, we had thoughtful and sentimental questions and funny and stupid questions all mixed up in a bowl. Questions like, 'If you had a yacht, what would you name it?' People just draw the questions and it really gets the conversation going. We all spent the whole time laughing and crying and having a great time."

Signature cocktails: Not just for weddings: "I'm a huge fan of a signature cocktail because it just makes everything — from the moment the guest walks in the door — so easy and so branded."

Flowers to the rescue

"A floral centerpiece can be really easy and beautiful if you just stick with monochromatic hues. I think floral foam is the most-needed home-keeper item. If you get a chunk of it and a dark vase, you'll be surprised at what you can do yourself. And a centerpiece will always make your home look gorgeous."

Two Spring Garden fixer-uppers get some major TLC

Rehabilitation. Loonstyn Properties is transforming two Fairmount buildings.

You may have noticed a few renovations taking place in Fairmount. Among them are the adjacent multi-family buildings at 21st and Spring Garden. The crew at Loonstyn Properties, also responsible for fixing up and renting out several buildings in the Fairmount and Art Museum area, has been working to turn the charming buildings into one-bedroom rentals designed for the young professionals that continue to move into the neighborhood.

Bill Loonstyn, president of the property company, will be the first to tell you that 2101 and 2103 Spring Garden St., though classic in their design, were both crying out for attention.

"They are two great buildings in a terrific location, but they were in need of restoration," says Loonstyn. "We are leveling the floors, repairing any structural deficiencies, replacing the mechanical systems and installing all high-end finishes in order to bring the buildings back to their former glory."

That "former glory" dates way, way back, like many of the city's homes. We're talking 1800s. A home that old is full of character and, in more cases than not, flaws. Loonstyn Properties has been working to keep the buildings' historic vibe while bringing everything up to par for renters.

"We're cleaning and fixing the building exteriors and installing all new windows, new HVAC, plumbing, electrical and roofing systems, new hardwood floors, appliances, cabinets and bathrooms," Loonstyn says. It's a laundry list of upgrades to complete, but Loonstyn seems to have things well underway. The expected completion date is August, which works perfectly for the area's burgeoning influx of grad students.

New home sales rise in US, housing recovery still on

The housing market recovery remains on track. / GETTY IMAGES, FUSE

Housing news. Home sales increased 18.5 percent over the same period last year. But inventory is low.

Sales of new U.S. single-family homes rose in March, indicating the housing market recovery remains on track.

The Commerce Department said on Tuesday that sales increased 1.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 417,000 units. Last month's rise followed a 7.6 percent drop in February.

Economists polled by Reuters had expected sales to rise to a 420,000-unit rate last month.

Compared with March 2012, sales were up 18.5 percent, indicating the strength in the housing market that has helped boost the economy was on course. Sales are being set back by a lack of supply of homes on the market in some major parts of the country.

While the inventory of new homes on the market rose 2 percent to 153,000 units, it was not far from record lows.

At March's sales pace, it would take 4.4 months to clear the houses on the market, the same pace in February.

Cost of a new home

$247K

The median sales price for a new home was $247,000, up 3 percent from a year ago.

A supply of six months is normally considered a healthy balance between supply and demand. The low months' supply should push up new home prices.

The median sales price for a new home was $247,000, up 3.0 percent from a year ago.

Sales last month in the Northeast surged 20.6 percent and rose 19.4 percent in the South. Those gains were partially offset by declines in the West and Midwest.

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21. It behooves you to get in touch with someone you recently met whom you'd like to know better.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. People will likely be responsive to your needs. Politely express yourself if you find that you need assistance of any kind.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22. Try to pal around with a friend whose ideas are compatible with yours. Conditions are excellent for both of you to gain something.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Even though you'll have little or no control over certain events, things should work out to your advantage.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. Don't be afraid to take a reasonable risk if conditions warrant it. Your judgment will be good.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Any project that requires imagination and creativity should be your cup of tea. Should you find yourself teamed up, the world will be your oyster.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. A recent relationship is likely to take on much greater dimensions. Each party will begin to see the other in greater depth.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. Conditions that have a strong bearing upon your material well-being could be eccentric but positive.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. You should watch out for a rare opportunity to say exactly the right thing to the right person at the right time.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. Yield to your restless urges, especially if they are directing you to get in touch with people you've been neglecting.

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20. When it comes to financial or commercial dealings, your instincts should be good. Don't second-guess yourself.

Sugar does not make a healthy snack

Re: "Your popcorn craving just got more fun" (Metro, April 23)
I hate to be the Grinch, but I was disappointed to read this article. Homemade popped popcorn (not from the bag) has always been a relatively healthy snack, especially when compared to the greasy Cheetos and creamy whoopie pies that it has to compete against. Which is why it unnerved me to see a recipe for popcorn containing sugar, corn syrup, butter and vanilla. And worse, the article advertised the recipe by saying it was "more fun." Why is it more fun? Because we are making popcorn into greasy butter balls? And furthermore, this recipe is advertised for KIDS. I believe these popcorn balls taste good, I really do. But shouldn't we move forward, not backwards, and go against the grain by trying to come up with recipes that are healthier. Like, for example, how about some popcorn with a pinch of salt and some nutritional yeast sprinkled on top? I think it is the newspaper's AND the state's responsibility to promote healthier eating, especially toward our younger generation, when we see how many people suffer from problems including but not limited to obesity and heart disease.

Hey now

Heyward goes on DL

Braves outfielder Jason Heyward was placed on the 15-day DL yesterday after undergoing an appendectomy late Monday. The 23-year-old began experiencing stomach pains in Pittsburgh, but as they became more serious, he went to a team trainer, who diagnosed the problem. He had his appendix removed upon arriving in Denver. Heyward will venture back to Atlanta, and there is no timetable for a return.

Happy reunion?

Cavaliers hire Brown

Mike Brown is back as head coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers after agreeing to a five-year, $20 million deal yesterday, according to ESPN. Brown coached the Cavs to five playoff appearances from 2005 to '10.

Parke, a Union defender, grew up in Abington and played his college soccer at Drexel.
GETTY IMAGES

Parke Place: Homegrown star shining

MLS. The Abington native is making his presence felt for the Union after nine years playing in the MLS.

Lead by example

"There's a lot of younger guys on defense, so I do my part to kind of steer the ship and show those guys the ropes a little bit," Parke said. "Guys have done a great job at welcoming me in and making me feel like part of the group, and letting me do my part. It's been a great couple months here and I'm looking forward to the rest of the season."

Sometimes, it makes all the difference in a player's career when he is able to come back home.

Some associate home as the franchise which they made a name for themselves. For example, the Union made a trade in the offseason for Sebastien Le Toux after he had thrived here in the 2010 and 2011 seasons.

Other times, coming home is exactly that: returning to the place where you started. In this case, look no further than Abington native Jeff Parke, who was traded in December to the Union for a 2013 Supplemental draft selection.

Parke played his college soccer at Drexel before being drafted in the 2004 MLS draft, along with Clint Dempsey and Freddy Adu.

Nine years later, he's back in Philly and making his presence felt.

"It's coming back in full circle for me," said Parke. "It's really awesome, and it's something I've always wanted to do. It's not that easy for a team to make a trade. You have to be playing well and be respected in the league. It was a situation where the Union needed me and I'm very thankful for it. It's one of the better things that's happened in my career."

It's one of the better things that's happened for the Union, as they sit at 3-2-2 and just beat D.C. United on the road, 3-2, Sunday for the first time in team history. Parke's happy to call Philly his home again and hopes to instill his wisdom in the youth of the team.

Brace yourselves: The Kelly era will officially begin on draft night

Kelly's first draft is here.
RIKARD LARMA, METRO

NFL. The Eagles may trade down tomorrow if the right opportunity presents itself.

The Eagles are on the clock.

It's the same place they have been since the midpoint of 2012, when the season unceremoniously spiraled out of control. The franchise's reward was the No. 4 overall pick in tomorrow night's NFL draft.

The names being considered there are common knowledge: Dion Jordan, Lane Johnson, Star Lotulelei, Eric Fisher, etc. But don't rule out the real possibility of the Eagles trading down, if the right opportunity presents itself.

They could swap the No. 4 pick for a combination of a lower pick in the first round and a late-round selection. Several reports have surfaced in recent days that the Eagles might be talking to Miami, who holds the No. 12 pick.

It makes sense after coach Chip Kelly mentioned last week there was no surefire choice.

"There is not a can't-miss player, is what I'm saying," he said. "So no matter who you take."

No matter which name Kelly calls out, it will be memorable.

MICHAEL GREGER
michael.greger@metro.us

All together now

According to Kelly, it's not all GM Howie Roseman.

- "We're all in there together," Kelly said. "I've met extensively with Howie [Roseman] and his group and our coaches collaborated with the scouting department in terms of their opinions. I think it's a collaborative effort."

And hypotheticals don't exist in Kelly's world.

- "I don't answer hypotheticals for that reason. We get into a million different things, because player Z from Mars I love better."

CARFAX VEHICLE HISTORY REPORTS

The Eagles hold the No. 4 overall draft pick in Thursday night's NFL Draft. The Birds struggled in acquiring productive, young talent in the last few seasons under Andy Reid. That could all change when Chip Kelly sends in his first choice as head coach. He has a myriad of options, too.

MIKE GREGER
mgreger@metro.us

3 Eagles draft targets

Lane Johnson, OT, Oklahoma
6-foot-6-inches, 303 lbs.

Lane Johnson is probably the most athletic offensive tackle in the draft and has been rising up boards as of late.

Johnson privately worked out for the Eagles, then made an official visit to the NovaCare Complex — so interest is there. Johnson is fast (4.72 in the 40), can jump out of his cleats (34 inches in vertical leap) and has quick, quick hands.

He played quarterback in high school and both tight end and defensive end at Oklahoma before switching to right tackle in 2011.

Then he moved over to left tackle in 2012 and didn't skip a beat. There's a huge upside here. Johnson, along with Luke Joeckel and Eric Fisher (two names that could be off the board at No. 4) is a potential franchise player.

Dion Jordan, Oregon, DE, 6-foot-6-inches, 248 lbs.

The defensive end/linebacker starred at Oregon under Chip Kelly and would be a perfect fit in an attacking 3-4 defense. Problem is, the Eagles have a myriad of hybrids already on the roster.

Dee Milliner, CB, Alabama
6-foot, 201 lbs.

Dee Milliner is the top-rated cornerback, and he'll no doubt be sitting there at No. 4.

He's considered a tough, physical corner adept at pressing receivers at the line — sound familiar? We're not saying that's a bad thing. If nothing else, Milliner would fill a dire need in the secondary.

There's no denying Milliner's feats. He was a first-team All-American as a junior and won praise for shutting down Notre Dame tight end Tyler Eifert in the BCS title game.

However, there are huge risks with Milliner, in the form of five surgeries (right knee, sports hernia, left shoulder, tibia), including a shoulder operation in March, an injury that will cause him to miss the beginning of training camp.
